CONVENTIONS PAY WELL.

WEEK.

That it pays a city to welcome a convention is well backed up by the statement that as a result of the national convocation of the order of the Elks in Cincinnati last week something like $1,705,000 was left with the business men of Cincinnati, By far the largest portion of this amount was left by the delegates of course, it being placed at $1,500,000. In decorations $100,000 was spent, in lights $80,000, in expenditures of renulon committee $65,-000, miscellaneous $10,000. There were 20,000 Elks and members of Elks' famihes present in Cincinnati during the Church conventions are oftentimes held in Barre because the difficulty of accomodution is obviated by the quartering of the delegates in private houses. With e'her than church conventions this scheme is impracticable, and so Barre is given Alls go-by when Vermont cities are canvassed as possible places in which the state conventions might meet. Until we have larger accommodations for the reception of guests, the business men of Barre will not have the advantages which those in s. Albans, Butland, Burlington and Mo tpeller now have.
